

INR 2002H Quiz 3*True/False

Indicate whether the statement is true (A) or false (B). (5 points each)

- _____ 1. Realists believe that the international system should be described as a state of anarchy.
- _____ 2. Acquiring power and keeping it is central to realist assumptions.
- _____ 3. A bipolar system is one in which there are two separate economic systems found in the international system.
- _____ 4. Realists assume that the state is a singular actor attending to its own needs regardless of the actions of the rest of the international system.
- _____ 5. The Roman empire is an example of a tripolar system.
- _____ 6. Hegemonic stability theory holds that a singular hegemon is able to keep relative peace and order in the international system.
- _____ 7. Realists assume that states are rational actors.
- _____ 8. Liberal IP thinkers completely dismiss the idea that states are rational actors that have an interest in power.
- _____ 9. Realists assume that the state is the main focus of international politics.
- _____ 10. For realists, the prisoner's dilemma illustrates the need for states to arm themselves despite their neighbor's good intentions or deeds.
- _____ 11. A zero-sum game is one where all sides gain benefits when playing the game.
- _____ 12. Liberals believe that states cannot disarm their nuclear stockpiles due to the increased risk of attack from other states.
- _____ 13. Liberal thinkers argue that the SALT-I and SALT-II talks illustrate why liberal theories may not work when applied to nuclear weapons negotiations.
- _____ 14. Realists argue that war is always a positive action for states as it assures greater power as a result of victory.
- _____ 15. The state is the main focus of analysis for complex interdependence theory.
- _____ 16. Complex interdependence theory holds that the international system is far too complex for states to arrange viable agreements to solve collective goods issues.
- _____ 17. Hans Morgenthau asserted that there are six principles vital to realist assumptions about the international system.
- _____ 18. According to Thomas Hobbes, life before government can be characterized as a state of peace and free trade.